

Freeze dryer

Freeze drying is the extraction of water from frozen material. The drying process takes place by sublimation, i.e. the direct transition from ice to water vapour. This takes place under vacuum, where the temperature in the sample material is less than -10°C .

The lab is equipped with a Christ Alpha-1-4 with 5 plates for samples.

Photo: Kai Mortensen